METROPOLITAN STATE UNIVERSITY’S THEATER UNDERGROUND & COMMUNICATIONS, WRITING & THE ARTS – PRESENT:

“At first I came back for the money.”
“English is not my second language, it’s my seventh.”
“I witnessed the horrors brought on by rage.”

THEATER DU JOUR

“I would love to start a revolution but I’m too busy paying off my credit card...”
“...hearing voices in my head”
“...the very act of observation can change the outcome.”

Join us giving voice to the real life stories of Metropolitan State students with Theater du Jour (Theater of the Day), an evening of original scenes, stories, and monologues about social and political issues concerning this diverse community in very personal and direct ways.

Adapted for the stage, these pieces deal with immigration; religious intolerance; gender identity; health care; war; economic racism; living with disabilities; the recession; political polarization; and exercises in truth telling and the classroom.

“This potpourri of passions, high and low, puts a distinctly human face on the issues of the day and our multigenerational campus.”
